Heroic teenage private is the face of commemorative first-class stamp

A PRIVATE who lied about his age so he could serve in the Army during World War I has been commemorated on a stamp bearing his image.

William "Billie" Tickle, who was born in Tottenham and grew up in Hornsey, told recruiters that he was 18 – but when he joined up on September 7, 1914, he was just 15 years old.

Despite his tender age, the teenager showed commendable bravery during almost two years' service before he was killed at Ovillers, in the Somme on July 3, 1916, while charging enemy lines.

His body was never found.

Now, however, he has been brought back to the public's memory in a series of stamps issued by the Royal Mail to mark a century since the start of the conflict on July 28, 1914. That was when Austria declared war on Serbia, with Britain declaring war on Germany a week later.

"Billie Boy" joined the Essex Regiment, and was part of the 9th Battalion, which was mobilised in France the following spring.

The troops landed in Boulogne on May 31, 1915, and were involved in a number of major offensives in the next 13 months before Private 13,510 Tickle was killed.

That included the Battle of Loos, from September 25 to October 14, in which 16,000 British troops died.

SHOESMITH GETS PAYOUT OF £679K

THE former head of Haringey children's services was awarded almost £680,000 after claiming for unfair dismissal.

According to figures in Haringey Council's draft accounts for 2013/14, Miss Shoesmith received £377,266 for salary, fees and allowance, £217,266 compensation payments for loss of office and £84,819 for employer pension contributions – a total of £679,452.

Miss Shoesmith was sacked from her six-figure job following a review into the death of 17-month-old Peter Connolly in August 2007.

The review revealed that the toddler had been systematically abused, or allowed to be abused, by his mother Tracey Connolly, her boyfriend Steven Barker and his brother Jason Owen.

That was despite being visited on about 60 occasions by social workers, health workers and other agencies.

However, in October last year Miss Shoesmith won a case for unfair dismissal, with the Court of Appeal concluding that she had been "unfairly scapegoated" by her removal from office in December 2008.

At the time, it was said that her payout would be a six-figure sum, believed to be around £600,000.

Haringey Council has always said the details of the compensation settlement remain confidential.

A spokeswoman said: "Following the decision of the Court of Appeal in favour of Ms Shoesmith, and the court's direction that the parties seek to resolve the issue of compensation, the London Borough of Haringey and Ms Shoesmith have reached a settlement in this case.

"The terms of the settlement are confidential. We are unable to comment further on this matter."

That was a line repeated by Miss Shoesmith, who told the BBC: "I have made a confidential agreement with Haringey that prevents me giving the actual figures."

But she added: "This is not a figure I recognise."

The payout was attacked by Ed Balls, currently the shadow chancellor, who ordered the review into the toddler's death and the roles of the local authority, health services and the police in 2008.

The Labour MP, who was Secretary of State for Children, Schools and Families from 2007 to 2010, told the BBC's Newsnight programme that Miss Shoesmith's payout left "a bad taste in the mouth".

Mr Balls, 47, said: "An independent report said there were disastrous failings in Haringey children's services.

"They said the management was at fault. Sharon Shoesmith was the director of children's services and so, of course, it leaves a bad taste in the mouth that the person who was leading that department, and responsible, ends up walking away with, it seems, a large amount of money."

Mustard gas clouded in secrecy

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

JOBS, money, power and unimaginable wealth are among the sometimes unexpected consequences of war.

Although it is uncomfortable to imagine that some people profit from death and destruction, the reality is that the industrial scale of military manufacturing brought prosperity to the Lee Valley during World War I.

As men lay dying in the trenches of northern France, production of the Lee-Enfield rifles, the standard-issue weapon given to British and Commonwealth troops, went into overdrive.

Nearly two million of the rifles were churned out at the plant, in what is now known as Enfield Island Village, and thousands of workers manned machines around the clock to keep the British Army stocked with weapons.

With the small arms factory knocking out guns at an industrial rate, along with the Royal Gunpowder Mills, in Waltham Abbey, and the shell works, in Wharf Road, Ponders End, a military industry was born.

According to historian Jim Lewis, these factories became hot houses of invention and design.

Back to nature:
The arms factory

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

"The First World War was really what we would recognise as the first modern war in terms of technology," he said.

"The technologies that were developed – such as cordite produced in the Royal Gunpowder Mills – would have happened anyway, but war pushes them along."

But Mr Lewis suspects that along with the inventions from the Lee Valley, such as cordite and the Lee-Enfield rifle, a more sinister weapon was being prepared behind tightly shut doors in a chemical plant in Ponders End – mustard gas.

"It is something I can't get to the bottom of," he admitted.

"We know that the shell works in Ponders End expanded by a third during this time and we know that Britain did produce mustard gas because it was trialled at Porton Down, in Wiltshire.

"We also know that Britain used mustard gas – and in fact in the Battle of Gaza in 1917, about 10,000 canisters were deployed.

"Shells were needed to contain this gas and opposite the shell works there was a chemical plant called Morsons.

"Records show that production increased dramatically in the period of the First World War and I would suggest that this increase in production was not more cough mixture."

Mr Lewis feels the discovery of a sample bottle, purported to contain mustard gas, in the factory in the 1950s and the fact that Winston Churchill, a chemical warfare advocate, visited the factory in 1916, suggest that Enfield could have produced one of the most notorious weapons of the war.

The once mighty Small Arms Factory is now surrounded by hundreds of newly-built homes.

And the Lee Valley that once would have been thick with the sounds and smells of industry is starting to be reclaimed by nature, with herons spotted spearing fish in the shallows of the River Lea – a sight unthinkable just 100 years ago.

Night a blazing airship crashed to earth

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

WHILE people normally associate German bombs falling on London with the Blitz of 1940/41, the capital was also attacked from the air during World War I.

The danger posed to Londoners came from a fleet of German airships which started bombing Britain in January 1915.

The first time such an airship was brought down in this country was on September 3, 1916.

During the early hours of that morning, the enemy launched a raid on north London with a fearsome airship called a Schütte Lanz SL11 – commonly known as a Zeppelin – which was commanded by Hauptmann Wilhelm Schramm.

While it is believed that the raid was aimed at the City of London, the airship did not drop its bombs there.

Instead, SL11 deposited one bomb on Crews Hill Golf Club, in Cattlegate Road, Enfield, nine bombs on the Stud Farm, in Clay Hill, Enfield, and others near the Enfield Isolation Hospital, in Worlds End Lane, Winchmore Hill, and on Oak Lodge Farm in Chase Road, Oakwood.

It also dropped a number of bombs on Edmonton, Ponders End and Enfield Highway.

But as the German crew released 12 explosive bombs towards Forty Hill and Turkey Street, the airship came under fire from a BE2c plane flown by 21-year-old Lieutenant William Leefe Robinson.

Flying underneath the German bomber, the pilot fired two drums of incendiary bullets into its body, but to no avail. However, his final round of bullets set the back of the airship on fire.

The burning airship, the body of which was made of wood, could be seen from miles away as it fell earthwards.

It eventually crashed into a field in Cuffley, Hertfordshire, behind the Plough Inn pub.

Contrary to expectation, it was not easy to ignite the hydrogen used to power these airships with standard bullets and shrapnel.

The Allies only started to exploit their vulnerability to fire when a combination of explosive and incendiary ammunition was introduced in 1916.

The Pomeroy incendiary bullets used to bring the airship down were produced under great secrecy at Eley's cartridge factory in Angel Road, Edmonton.

Three horses died during the raid, but residents escaped unharmed.

A souvenir booklet from that time dedicated to the downing of the airship includes a photograph of Lt Robinson, noting that he "attacked the Zeppelin under circumstances of great difficulty and danger and sent it crashing to the ground as a flaming wreck".

The bodies of the 16-strong German crew were later buried in Potters Bar. In the 1960s, they were dug up and reburied at the German war cemetery in Cannock Chase, Staffordshire.

Lt Robinson, who died in 1918 from the effects of Spanish flu, received a Victoria Cross for his heroics.

The loss of the SL11 is credited with ending the German Army's enthusiasm for such bombing raids.

THE GREAT WAR STARTED 100 YEARS AGO ON JULY 28TH 1914

What happened to those men who wouldn't fight?

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

WITH millions of men dying for their country during World War I, a particular resentment was reserved for those who refused to fight.

Once conscription was introduced in early 1916, due to the sheer scale of the deaths on the front line, those who objected to war on moral grounds were abused for being "conchie" or handed white feathers in a bid to publicly humiliate them for their perceived cowardice.

Those men who refused to go to war on grounds of conscientious objection faced an impossible situation – if their application for exemption was refused, many were still forced to either join up and fight or face long jail sentences.

As records published online from the National Archives at Kew show, it was frequently a complex process.

Draughtsman William Brown, 31, of Edenbridge Road, Bush Hill Park, applied from exemption on the grounds that: "I hold most strong views on the sacredness of human life and cannot under any circumstances take upon myself the duty of killing or assisting in the process of killing my fellow human beings."

He added that the strength of his convictions made it "a physical impossibility" for him to do anything other than "follow his conscience".

An Edmonton tribunal granted him exemption from combatant service, but because he did not want to be connected in any way to the killing machine of war he appealed against the decision, demanding an absolute exemption from anything that would contribute to the "canker of hatred that is eating into the nations of Europe". In his letter of appeal, he wrote: "No dispute justifies the taking of life, the destruction of nature and the wasting of human energies."

Despite his impassioned plea, a central appeal tribunal not only turned down his request for an absolute exemption, but also withdrew his certificate of exemption from combatant duty.

The opposite was true for James Bull, 22, of Sydney Road, Enfield, who applied for an exemption on moral grounds.

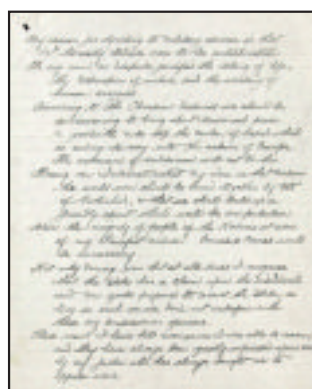

An Enfield tribunal ruled his "claim on conscientious grounds was not genuine, but advanced purely to escape military service".

Undeterred, Mr Bull submitted an appeal. In his letter, he wrote that he was a "follower of Jesus Christ" and that for him there was no distinction between combatant and non-combatant service.

Following a ruling by the appeal tribunal in Westminster, in central London, he was granted exemption from combatant service.

By the first week of June 1916, Southgate tribunal had received 587 claims for exemption from military service – but it refused to grant a single absolute exemption.

THE GREAT WAR STARTED 100 YEARS AGO ON JULY 28TH 1914

Hospitals sprang up as war intensified

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

WHEN World War I broke out, many said it would be “over by Christmas”. But by the end of the year, and with the start of trench warfare in mainland Europe, it became obvious this was wishful thinking.

As casualties on the battlefields mounted, increasing numbers of soldiers were being brought back to British shores for treatment.

Makeshift and more permanent military hospitals sprang up everywhere.

In Enfield, the main place where wounded soldiers received treatment was the Edmonton Military Hospital, in Silver Street, known today as North Middlesex University Hospital.

The first hospital buildings were constructed on the present-day site in 1909 and the Edmonton Infirmary, as it was then called, was founded in 1910 under first medical officer Dr Spencer Mort and first matron Annie Dowbiggin.

The hospital had 12 wards and two ambulances.

In April 1914, the hospital was renamed the Edmonton Military Hospital and the following month wounded combatants started arriving at the then Edmonton Low Level Station, from where they were taken to the hospital.

Crowds gathered to greet the injured men as they passed through Hertford Road and Silver Street.

The hospital provided care for soldiers and civilians and had 2,000 beds to treat the casualties.

Gently does it: A casualty arrives by ambulance at Edmonton Military Hospital

Between May 1915 and May 1918, 32,248 wounded servicemen were treated at the hospital. Many of them died, and they were buried at Edmonton Cemetery, in Church Street.

As the war went on, the need for medical facilities increased.

In March 1917, St Mark's Institute, in Bush Hill Park, became a military hospital with 50 beds and an emergency hospital with 40 beds was set up in Elm House, in Gentleman's Row, Enfield.

Grovelands House, in Southgate, became a military hospital in 1916 and Tottenhall School, in Palmer's Green, was used for this purpose between 1916 and 1919.

Edmonton Military Hospital was renamed North Middlesex in 1920.

During World War II, it was bombed by the Nazis but continued to provide treatment for injured soldiers. Today the buildings have become the hospital trust's headquarters and its foundation stone is still visible in the façade.

Shell works vital

THE Ponders End Shell Works provided one of Enfield's most crucial contributions to the World War I effort.

The massive munitions factory was built in Wharf Road in 1915 in response to the Shell Crisis, caused by a huge increase in demand for shells on the Western front.

In May 1915, Chancellor of the Exchequer David Lloyd George was made Minister of Munitions in a new department created to solve the munitions shortage.

Using grants from the ministry, the factory was expanded and employed 6,000 people to work day and night, including a large number of girls and women.

In the first half of 1916 alone, 600,000 eight-inch shells were produced there. The shells were taken to the front line, where they were fired from heavy mortars, many of which were produced at the Royal Arsenal, in Woolwich, south-east London.

Winston Churchill, who succeeded Lloyd George as Minister of Munitions, visited the factory in September 1917 to encourage its workers and underline the importance of their work to the war effort.

The factory closed in 1919 and many of the buildings were sold off or demolished.

Finance chief in pound shop U-turn

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A COUNCIL finance chief, who admitted it was "not ideal" for a fourth pound shop to open in a mall in one of the most deprived parts of the borough, now insists the local authority welcomes the bargain basement shop.

In fact, mayor of Enfield Ali Bakir did the honours by cutting the ribbon to mark the opening of national retailer Poundworld's shop within metres of the entrance to rival Poundland in Edmon-ton Green shopping centre last Thursday.

Caught on camera: Mayor Ali Bakir at the opening of the new shop in Edmon-ton

Last week cabinet member for finance Andrew

Stafford was reluctant to endorse yet another bargain-bin store in an area the council has earmarked for widespread economic regeneration.

But despite his fears that a cluster of discount shops reinforces the impression that poverty is endemic, Mr Stafford then welcomed the decision of Mr Bakir to open the store while cameras from Channel 4 series Pound Wars were filming.

And he denied that this in any sense celebrated the fact that the people of Edmon-ton depended on cut-price retailers.

Mr Stafford said: "The mayor undertakes a significant number of engagements at a wide range of venues across a wide range of subjects. The council works actively to encourage respected national retailers to open stores which offer jobs and income to Enfield residents at a time of economic need."

Mr Bakir told the Advertiser: "We welcome any investors who create jobs and income for the council and lower the cost of shopping for the community."

He denied that a close cluster of cheap and cheerful retailers created a ghettoised environment.

"I guess that Pound-world has done surveys in the area and found out there is a demand for it," he added.

Parents branded 'naive' in places row

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A LOBBY group made up of parents worried about the lack of school places in their area were attacked at a council meeting for their "naive perceptions".

The South West Enfield Action Team, headed by campaigner Gonul Daniels, delivered a deputation to the cabinet meeting at Enfield Civic Centre, in Silver Street, last Wednesday evening.

They asked why the area their campaign focuses on – specifically Fox Lane and the surrounding streets in Southgate – is still a catchment area blackspot.

Speaking on behalf of the lobby group, Mrs Daniels told the meeting: "The report that went to cabinet last year was very clear, it said: 'Extra primary reception places – two forms of entry – are needed in the south west of the borough from September 2014'."

Mrs Daniels insisted that the eventual proposed solution of an extra form at Bowes Primary School was simply not good enough.

"The probability is that this single form will be quickly oversubscribed because of all the extra housing nearby," she told councillors.

Campaigner:
Gonul
Daniels

Although education boss Andrew Fraser insisted there was a three per cent surplus of primary school places in the south west of the borough, the parents appeared confused when he referenced the new Edmonton County primary branch as being one of the schools to which they could send their children.

Maria Licheri Alexandrou, who lives in Fox Lane and whose daughter does not have a place at any primary for this coming September, told the Advertiser that as an experiment she had tried the drive to Edmonton County Primary, in Little Bury Street, Edmonton.

"It took us 25 minutes one morning and even longer doing the run on the way back in afternoon traffic. I just couldn't put my children through that," she said.

When Mrs Daniels asked if it was not ideal to have as much as a ten per cent surplus, as recommended by the Audit Commission, so parents could exercise real choice, she was told by the cabinet member for education Ayfer Orhan that this was a "naive perception".

When pressed on what was being done to improve the lot of parents who live outside catchment areas of schools, Mrs Orhan pointed to the surplus of places in both Garfield Primary, in Springfield Road, New Southgate, and De Bohun, in Green Road, Southgate.

Orhan: council is among top performing in London

COUNCIL chiefs have hit back at school places campaigners and are adamant there is no shortage of primary school places in the borough.

Cabinet member for education and children's services Ayfer Orhan stressed that the local authority has spent millions of pounds on expanding schools.

She said: "Finding good-quality school places for our children is a top priority for this administration."

According to Mrs Orhan, 93 per cent of children across the borough got their first or second-choice school for September 2014.

She said this places Enfield in the top five performing London boroughs and added: "This is because we have provided more than 4,400 additional primary school places in permanent high-quality buildings across the borough over the past four years – with a further 2,000 places due to follow as a result of the current expansion programme.

"These school places are being located where they are most needed, so that we can offer high-quality education for all our young people."

Vadi Restaurant was established in 2011 and it is a fully licensed, air conditioned restaurant with a refrigerated display of raw kebabs, a steaming sizzling ocaak grill, a hot table laden with simmering stews and braises. Hot pide and sac breads accompany starters of lentil soup or garlicky cacick, and ezme is a winning dish of roasted aubergine mashed with olive oil, fresh tomato, green herbs and hot pepper. Vadi Restaurant has a capacity of 220 people.

As one of the most famous Ocakbasi restaurants in London we also have private function rooms available and cater for single, couples and families. Vadi Restaurant is a true open grill restaurant (ocakbasi). It is a friendly place, a world away from the average kebab house and everything on the menu is fresh and served daily.

Our winning formula is fresh marinated meats, fish and vegetables skewered and grilled over hot charcoals in our Ocakbasi open kitchen. Our freshly baked bread puts the finishing touch to the great atmosphere of Vadi Restaurant.

Chickenshed Theatre

CHICKENSHEDED really is for everyone – from the youngest child to the most mature adult. Our aim is to enable everyone to enjoy the magic of theatre together.

We started our hugely successful Tales from the Shed programme for children aged up to seven in 1996. We perform on Friday and Saturday mornings during term time, take the show to the Dugdale Centre, in Enfield, as well as other venues around the UK, and we appear regularly at the Edinburgh Fringe.

A recent reviewer said: "If you have young children, get yourself to this show straightaway. If you don't, borrow one or just go anyway for a wonderful reminder of the power of theatre and the sheer pleasure it can bring."

It was given five stars.

Each year our Tales team creates a new summer holiday show for children aged three to seven. This year's show, London Bridges, has just returned from playing to capacity crowds at the Barclaycard British Summer Time Festival at Hyde Park – on the same bill as Sir Tom Jones, Boyzone and Little Mix.

It tells the story of Jack, our hero story collector. He lives on one of London's many bridges and is on a quest to collect the magical stories brought to his city from around the world.

Puppets, music and madcap energy all collide to make London Bridges a theatrical highlight for younger children.

London Bridges is now being performed in our studio theatre with shows at 10am, 11.30am and 1pm.

Licence scheme just a cash cow

RE: "Landlord starts legal fight over £500 licence scheme" (Advertiser, July 23).

It appears to me that the Labour administration is not being honest with the electorate.

The real reason for the introduction of the so-called landlord registration scheme is to simply raise money (approximately £10million over the next five years).

The scheme was introduced based on potentially flawed research and data.

Oddly, Enfield Council is one of the largest landlords in the borough, but will not be paying any fees in respect of properties it owns, nor will its enforcement section take action against the housing section in the event of any antisocial behaviour by its own tenants.

I believe that this could be the thin end of the wedge, with other money-making schemes coming forward in the future.

How about an extra tax on councilors' earnings?

Enfield's a rubbish place to live

THERE appear to be a couple of competitors in Enfield Highway to the Barrowell Green [recycling] complex, namely the junction of Hertford Road and Carterhatch Road and the junction of Hertford Road and Longfield Avenue.

These two sites are always full of foul-smelling rubbish which, as if by magic, disappear at quite regular intervals. If it is not the fairies, then I can only assume that it is Enfield Council.

While I applaud the action of our council to remove this offending garbage, I do worry that if I deposit a cigarette butt on the pavement I will be fined £80.

This suggests that weight wise I am paying about £500,000 for my carelessness compared to the nil charge for a bag of fly-tipped waste.

Enfield was once referred to as the top London borough.

However, after 71 years of living in Enfield, I now feel ashamed to reside somewhere which was once an area to be proud of.

Tree-mendous efforts need to be applauded

RE: "Lollipop clock not a striking centrepiece" (Letters, Advertiser, July 16).

While I agree with Mr Wood that the erection of a rather undistinguished clock on the Triangle, right, was a mistake at a time when Enfield Council is currently engaged on an overall review of Palmers Green town centre, I must take issue with his unfair criticism of the removal of the much-loved horse chestnut tree.

Horse chestnut trees are under threat nationwide due to an incurable fungal disease which the council could not prevent, so it had to go for visual and safety reasons.

In recent times, the council has understood very well how important street trees are for their visual impact and shade/air-conditioning effects, and has planted very many more of them.

For this, it should be congratulated. Whether or not the clock has a future in a revamped town centre must be open to doubt until the overall plan is agreed, so it's certainly fair to call it "clutter" at the moment.

Education chief should back bid for new primary

A LACK of primary school places has been a weeping sore in Enfield for some years through stagnated lack of action from 2010 onwards.

At last week's cabinet meeting, the Conservative councillors merely asked in a motion that Labour councillor Ayfer Orhan write to Nicky Morgan, the Secretary of State for Education, expressing her support for Ashmole Academy and its application to build a primary school which is badly needed in the area.

The initial application was refused through lack of support from Enfield.

The impact of this decision affects families in Southgate and Barnet.

The three Conservative councillors for Southgate welcome the good news that Ashmole has reapplied and hope the application is better supported by Ms Orhan this time.

She refuses to support free schools and did not back the initial application because of this.

By not writing to Ms Morgan and supporting the second application, it will mean families will end up wondering where their children will go.

The Labour council is split on this matter as Bambos Charalambous agreed to write to Ms Morgan – and he is not responsible for education.

Southgate needs more primary school places, not a political football, and this application or the potential site using the old Minchenden School site are far more sensible and cost-effective than the scary proposals from Ms Orhan to build on parkland.

Pound shops are not just for the poor

RE: Councillor Andrew Stafford's comments (Advertiser, July 23) that more pound shops in Edmonton Green are proof hardship continues on the east of the A10 and there is no recovery.

This is an insult to people who use these shops simply as one of the tools for home budgetary control and good domestic financial management.

It may interest him to know there have been at least three pound shops in Palmers Green for a few years.

Should he ever venture into this part of the borough, then he would have known this.

Unfortunately, budgetary control and good financial management is not something his Labour Party was good at when it was in control of the country's finances.

Let's hope the council's finances fare better under his stewardship.

Tim's champion golfing display

WHITEWEBBS Golf Club member Tim Batt became the Middlesex county private champion after recording a 77 in tough, windy conditions at Crews Hill Golf Club.

To understand the magnitude of his victory, you have to understand that Whitewebbs is a club on a public course and has a membership of less than 60.

This means Whitewebbs cannot compete with the facilities which private clubs can supply, making Tim's achievements even more incredible.

He is Whitewebbs Golf Club's first county champion at any level in its 82-year history.

Festival casts a spell on crowds

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

HUNDREDS of people descended on Pymmes Park for the Edmonton Summer Festival.

The event, known in previous years as the Spellbound Festival, was held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the park in Victoria Road – where the Edmonton Summer Theatre was held during the 1970s and 1980s.

The festival boasted music, theatre, community stages, a crafts area and a funfair.

Children got stuck into games, craft-making and impromptu performances around the community and theatre stages.

An older audience gathered at the music stage for local stars Janet Kay and Lurine Cato, as well as soul singer Omar.

Organiser Paul Everitt, artistic director at Millfield Arts Centre, in nearby Silver Street, said: "It was just a wonderful event – we drew three times as many people as last year."

"The whole community came together and had a very positive shared experience."

"The showcase of local talent on the Friday was mind-blowing and on Saturday we saw some truly special performances from Janet Kay and Lurine Cato, who were playing in the community they grew up in."

Organisers expect the event to return to Pymmes Park next year.

Health firm to run community centre

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

NHS chiefs have selected a GP-run health firm to run primary care services at a new, council-owned community centre in Enfield Lock.

Haverstock Healthcare Ltd, which is run by a coalition of 26 London GP practices, has won the contract from NHS England to provide health services at the new Ordnance Unity Centre, in Ordnance Road, when it opens this autumn.

The announcement was made a year after the demolition of Ordnance Road Library got under way as part of a joint council and NHS effort to provide a new community facility including a library and surgeries for doctors and dentists.

Haverstock beat two other applicants, who took part in a procurement process run by NHS England, which commissions primary care services.

The firm has strong links to the Royal Free London NHS Foundation Trust and the Central London Community Healthcare NHS Trust.

Before providing services at the Ordnance Unity Centre, the company is planning to take over existing services at a surgery just a few doors down from the new centre in September.

Don McGowan, Enfield Council's cabinet member for health and adult social care, said this would give doctors a chance to get to know the area and its patients.

He said: "The Ordnance Unity Centre is bringing much-needed services to the local community, who have helped us to develop the centre."

On the up: The Ordnance Unity Centre

"It is reassuring to know that an award-winning team of doctors will be working from the new centre and that they are prepared to work from 171 Ordnance Road until they can move into it. This will give them a chance to get to know local people and support them and their families."

Haverstock is encouraging residents who are not registered with a GP to register with them, and say the process will be "easier than ever".

The firm's chief executive Dr Mike Smith added: "We were founded on the principles of being led and owned by GPs and we will create a great practice by preserving the values of a family doctor while eliminating some of the frustrations."

An NHS England spokesman added: "We believe that the new surgery will offer a high standard of much-needed GP services to a part of Enfield where registration is very low."

"The surgery will help support people in the community and reduce unnecessary A&E attendances, reducing pressure on local hospitals."

Festival marks growing taste for Persian culture

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A FESTIVAL celebrating Persian culture begins at artsdepot today.

The London Persian-English international theatre festival opens at the venue in Nether Street, North Finchley with a segment of the epic Shahnameh, the Persian "Book of Kings" poem.

It was penned more than 1,000 years ago by the revered Abolghasem Ferdowsi and has been rewritten for a modern audience by Iran-born writer Reza Daneshvar.

Artistic director of the festival Soussan Farrokhiha reveals that the celebration of Persian culture has returned for a second year after the rave reception it received first time out.

"This year the festival is bigger and better," promises Soussan.

"We are in the wonderful artsdepot in north Finchley and we are hoping to attract audiences of between 300 and 400 people."

Soussan, who is a director herself, says that the highlight of this year's festival is the emphasis it places on celebrating the Persian diaspora.

The event is showcasing work by people who may not have been born in Iran, but who have grown up within Persian culture.

Artistic director: Soussan Farrokhiha

"Persian culture is not just limited to Iranians," she stresses, explaining that Persian dialects are spoken in parts of Afghanistan and Tajikistan.

She adds that in north London there is a growing hunger for representations of Persian culture and identity in the arts.

"In Barnet alone there are almost 5,000 of us and you can see it in Finchley," she says. "All around the artsdepot there are Iranian shops and restaurants and, of course, this festival is ideal for English speakers interested in learning more about this culture as all performances will feature subtitles in English."

Tickets for each performance throughout the festival cost £12 and a festival pass can be bought for £100.

For more information or to buy tickets, call the booking line on 07804 958 676.

UK CYPRIOTS AND BRITISH PARLIAMENTARIANS RALLY IN SUPPORT OF CYPRUS

- British Cypriots, supporters and politicians from across the UK's political spectrum reiterated their support for a reunited Cyprus. This was both at a meeting held in the House of Commons on 8th July and at the Rally for Cyprus on Sunday 13th July held in a show of solidarity against Turkey's intransigence over efforts to end Turkey's 40 years' illegal military occupation of the northern part of Cyprus. These events were organised by the National Federation of Cypriots in the UK.
- The meeting in the House of Commons was preceded by a demonstration in support of the Organisation of Families of Missing Cypriots UK.
- The Rally was preceded by a letter of protest to the Turkish Ambassador in London, delivered by the President and Officers of the National Federation.
- A petition was also delivered to 10 Downing Street, in which the National Federation's President, Peter Droussiotis calls upon Prime Minister David Cameron to apply leverage on Turkey to withdraw its occupying troops and to play an active and positive role in current efforts to reunite Cyprus for the benefit of all Cypriots.
- At Trafalgar Square, Peter Droussiotis added "The tragedy of Cyprus is compounded because the will of the United Nations has been defied with complete impunity by successive Turkish governments for 40 years (meaning) the failure of the international community to hold Turkey to account... Today we remind the world of the utter injustice of the continuing division of Cyprus, the disgrace of a divided capital - Nicosia - in a united Europe..."
- Sir Alan Meale MP, spoke of how Cyprus "deserves justice as a member of the European Union, Commonwealth and the United Nations" and highlighted "the sacrifice of so many Cypriot lives to protect freedom and democracy in two World Wars".
- The key speaker from the Republic of Cyprus was the Minister of Energy, Commerce, Industry & Tourism, George Lakkotripis. The Minister said that "It is really far too long - 40 years - for Justice to be served in Cyprus, especially when the just cause of the island has been recognised by numerous resolutions of the United Nations and is based on the principles and values of the European Union".
- Amongst those demonstrating their solidarity with the Cyprus cause at the Rally and in Parliament were Theresa Villiers, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, MPs Sir Alan Meale, Mike Freer, David Burrowes, Andy Love, Chris Bryant, Jim Sheridan, MEP Charles Tannock, Lord Toby Harris, former MPs Andrew Dismore and Ian Twinn.
- The Cyprus High Commissioner H.E. Euripides Evriviades, represented the Cyprus High Commission and Ambassador Konstantinos Bikas represented Greece.
- The Mayor of occupied Kythrea, Petros Kareklas, spoke on behalf of the illegally occupied municipalities in Cyprus.
- The President of the National Federation thanked community member Nikos Savvides for his part in the Rally in stirring all those present.

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

Man and boy: 76-year-old Charlie Richardson working on the stall and, above, getting a taste for it aged four with his uncle John Clarke

After seven decades, Charlie really does know his onions

By Koos Couvee

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

A GREENGROCER who has been selling vegetables to the residents of Edmonton from the same place for more than seven decades has been given a life-time achievement award by the mayor of Enfield.

Henry Frederick "Charlie" Richardson, 76, was presented with the award by mayor Ali Bakir at the Edmonton Summer Festival in Pymmes Park on Saturday for his services to the community, more than 70 years after he first worked on his uncle John Clarke's vegetable stall in Leeds Street.

Charlie, as he is known in Edmonton, was just four years old when he started helping out at the stall.

From the age of 16, the grandfather-of-eight worked in other part-time jobs – but when he was 23 he was asked to join the stall full time. He has never left.

"There was just so much work in those days," said Mr Richardson, of Raynham Terrace.

"Fore Street was probably the busiest stretch of road coming out of London. All the big retail shops were there and we did a good trade."

Uncle John died in the late 1980s and Mr Richardson was asked to take over the licence, which he duly did. He still drives down to Spitalfields Market, in east London, at 3am every day except Sundays and Mondays to pick up fresh produce and then returns to Edmonton to set up his stall for 8am.

The sprightly septuagenarian added: "I hope to carry on as long as I can. It supports my pension, it gets me out of the house and it keeps me going."

"I can't afford to employ anybody, so it's just me. But my brother comes down and helps out every week and my grandchildren also help out quite a lot."

Asked whether he thinks his grandchildren will take over the stall one day, he said: "I don't see it happening, really. When I was younger, there was good living to be made, but it's more difficult these days."

"It's a different world today – not that many people cook fresh food any more. There are lots of take-aways everywhere."

Standing outside the music stage in Pymmes Park on Saturday, to his great surprise, Mr Richardson heard his name being called out on the sound system. Moments later, he was presented with the award.

"It was a total surprise," he added. "I felt like I wasn't quite with it, but it was lovely."

Council forced to put licensing scheme on hold after legal challenge

A legal challenge against a blanket licensing scheme has been mounted by a landlord. The scheme has become a political hot potato in Enfield, north London. Constantinos Regas has now applied for a judicial review of Labour-run Enfield Council's decision to launch a mandatory licensing scheme covering every rented property in the borough. His action was enough to cancel a debate scheduled to take place at a full council meeting last Thursday night, to discuss a paper put forward by Tory councillors opposing the scheme. Under the council's scheme, every landlord will need to get a £500 licence lasting five years for each property. Enfield argues that licensing is required to cut anti-social behaviour, tackle rogue landlords, raise standards and reduce overcrowding. The scheme was given final approval by the council's overview and scrutiny committee where a group of landlords made their protests after a petition signed by nearly 2,000 people. Conservative opposition leader Cllr Terry Neville, who is against the scheme, said he was disappointed no debate took place last week. He said: "Although I understand the legal reasons given by the council's lawyers for postponing this debate, I do not agree that they are right. '[We believe] that the decision to create a landlord licensing scheme was unnecessary due to existing and new measures being put into place by the Conservative-led government to tackle the small minority of rogue landlords. 'The standard of private rented homes is a very big issue as the number of rented properties has increased in recent years in our borough, and it is our belief that the new measures being introduced by the Government, together with the diligent application of the existing law by the council against the minority of bad landlords, would be more effective in tackling the problem. 'I am keen therefore to debate this matter in the near future.' The opposition agreed to adjourn the debate until a decision has been made on his challenge for a judicial review. A council spokesman said: "Enfield Council approved the additional selective licensing scheme on April 9. This decision was affirmed on April 30 by the overview and scrutiny committee. "The scheme has been introduced to reduce anti-social behaviour in the borough. "The opposition priority paper titled 'Tackling abuse in the private rented sector' was submitted by the Opposition for July's full council meeting before the judicial review claim was issued. "Following Enfield Council's receipt of the judicial review claim, the opposition agreed at full council on July 16 to adjourn their paper until the judicial review is disposed of. "Enfield Council is vigorously defending the judicial review. It would be prejudicial to disclose the details of the council's defence at this stage." It is understood that Mr Regas is seeking to challenge the council's evidence base behind its decision, the legitimacy of the consultation process, and whether the terms and conditions of the licences are reasonable.

YOUR FIRST VIEWINGS WILL BE ONLINE

Today's buyers are increasingly savvy; they research the local area online, review brochures and floor plans, as well as look at different property portals. And they do all of this before they make a single call to an agent, or even consider stepping foot in a house. In this increasingly digital world it's important to get everything right online. Gina Antoniou, Head of Office at Savills Barnet, shares her tips on getting it right online to ensure potential buyers make that important call and view properties...

PROPERTY PORTALS

Statistics show that over 70% of property searches start online and 50% of the traffic on Savills websites comes from property portals (Savills data). With this in mind, make sure your agent advertises their properties on the major search portals.

PRESENTATION

With information at a buyer's fingertips, make sure your agent has organised good quality, professional photography of your home. A professional photographer is trained to make the best of a property. This can make the difference between a potential buyer picking up the telephone or clicking onto the next property.

BROCHURES & FLOOR PLANS

A professional brochure is essential; some agents can offer brochures with interactive features that overlay the floor plan. This helps potential buyers to really visualise the space and layout of a property.

VIDEOS

Your agent may be able to produce a short video of your property. This will quickly and simply demonstrate the key features to buyers in an interesting and easy to view way.

Vendors are often concerned that a video, the brochure and all the other information a potential buyer can find online is giving away too much. This really isn't the case. In today's fast moving world everyone wants information at their fingertips. If they can't find what they are looking for they'll move on and look at something else. With all the technological developments available today agents are able to better assess buyers. Your agent should be able to tell you how many times your property has been searched and how many links have been clicked online. With all this information available, when potential buyers do pick up the telephone we know they are already serious, qualified buyers.

If you want to find out more about how careful online marketing can help sell your home, contact Savills.

Tourer passes holiday test

By Matt Joy

THERE is no sterner test for a family car than loading it up for a family trip. Every seat is filled and every possible cubby hole becomes stuffed with snacks, drinks and eventually rubbish.

Comfort becomes the most important thing and any niggles become magnified as the miles mount up.

And the prospect of travelling four-up, including a small person, from Gloucestershire all the way to the east coast of Ireland and back again was undoubtedly one of these proper tests.

As much as the idea of a holiday was pleasing, the thought of the journey was giving me a headache.

But the first hurdle was negotiated without any trouble at all.

Any kind of holiday packing always ends up with enough outfits to clothe a small town, but the Civic swallowed it all without any grief and with space to spare.

The generous 117-litre under floor area catered for lots of odds and ends that wouldn't be needed until later on, while the main compartment took a large suitcase, one big and one small bag, plus some other odds and ends – again with room to spare and below the level of the luggage cover.

Then there's the travelling bit of course. A solid 500 miles from home to the Atlantic coast of Ireland took in motorways, dual carriage-ways, a ferry crossing and the kind of bumpy back road that makes your average British B-road look like a billiard table.

But the miles sailed by with ease. The standard fit cruise control not only took the strain out of the dull motorway bit, but also helped the economy, too.

With 70mph dialled in, the Civic ticked along happily delivering 65mpg and more despite the full load.

Apart from four hours of sitting down on the boat, the trip also meant nine hours behind the wheel, but mercifully the Civic's driving position is good and the seats are comfortable over distance.

With EX Plus spec there are adjustable side bolsters for the driver and lumbar support for both front seat occupants.

Small things like being able to switch the speedometer readout from miles to kilometres per hour also helped to make life just that bit easier.

The final ace in the Civic's hand was the adaptive damping system, fitted on SR models and above.

Switched into Comfort mode, even the worst Irish roads were dealt with very capably, while on the rare occasion when the roads opened up, Dynamic mode meant the Civic could be driven with vigour.

A pass with flying colours then. The versatility of the Tourer is proving to be its greatest asset.

I'd like to say that I'll be able to go easy on it from now on, but with the long summer holiday still to come, it's only going to get worked harder still.

NU BLU

Mark is raring to go in his new Electronic Blue Fiat 500S. The integrated sports styling kit totally appeals to his inner petrol-head – that's body-coloured side skirts, rear spoiler, and chrome exhaust, not to mention optional 16" alloys. Inside, sports seats with accent-blue stitching and dark tinted rear windows drive the point home. And the all-new 7" TFT crystal digital display gives him his tech fix. TwinAir engine means low-CO₂ emissions and no road tax*. Hat from HeadStrong, Hutton Garden, London.

DUO SIGN FOR SPURS AS SIGURDSSON GOES

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR have made their first moves in the transfer market this summer by bringing in Ben Davies and Michel Vorm from Swansea City in a deal which will see Gylfi Sigurdsson move in the opposite direction.

Spurs confirmed last week that highly-rated Welsh international left-back Davies had signed a five-year contract with the club, while keeper Vorm – who was part of the Netherlands' World Cup squad – has agreed a four-year deal.

"I'm very happy to be joining a club like Spurs," Davies said. "It was such a good opportunity for me and there was no doubt in my mind about it. It's a great place to be and something I jumped at the chance of being part of."

"I just want to play as many games as I can this season. My aim is to come in and do my best and work hard under the new gaffer."

"The squad has been great to me, very welcoming, and when you join a new squad that makes it all the easier when you are with such a good bunch of lads. The quality has been excellent and I'm really looking forward to the new season."

"If the manager can get Tottenham working in a similar way to he did at Southampton then we will be hard to beat, and with the talented players we have in attack it could be a perfect combination."

While Davies should be contending for a regular place in the side, Vorm is likely to be a back-up to Hugo Lloris – but the Dutchman is looking forward to competing for the goalkeeper's shirt.

"Every club has two top goalkeepers in their squad," Vorm said. "It suits the club's philosophy that there are two of us with Hugo and me, especially when we see that Tottenham is active in a lot of competitions."

"I'm moving to a big club and it's a good challenge for me. Sometimes when a club like Spurs comes along you have to consider the future and make a decision."

However, the arrival of the duo has coincided with the departure of Sigurdsson as the Iceland international midfielder has returned to the club where he spent a year on loan before moving to White Hart Lane in 2012.

Meanwhile, Tottenham ended their pre-season tour of the United States by easing to a 2-0 victory over Chicago Fire on Saturday.

Harry Kane and Aaron Lennon scored the goals, and head coach Mauricio Pochettino expressed his satisfaction at the display.

He said: "I'm very pleased for the players, because we've finished with a good win and a clean sheet – and that's a boost for the confidence."

"It was difficult in the humidity, but well done to the players – it was a good game out there. I'm happy for all of them. I thought we played well."

"We've worked hard on this tour and congratulations to the players, staff and the supporters. They've been fantastic."

Moving on: Gylfi Sigurdsson has signed for Swansea City after spending the past two seasons at Tottenham

Skolars miss out against basement side

THE London Skolars suffered a narrow defeat on Sunday as they were beaten 19-18 at basement side South Wales Scorpions in rugby league's Kingstone Press Championship One.

The Skolars had suffered a humbling defeat when the two sides met at the New River Stadium earlier in the season – the Scorpions' only other win of the campaign – and they did at least compete better on this occasion before eventually losing to a late drop-goal.

The hosts had Ashley Bate-man sin-binned for dissent early on, but the Skolars were unable to take advantage of their extra man and fell behind through an unconverted try from Phil Carleton.

Although the Skolars hit back and went ahead when Courtney Davies touched down under the posts for a try which he converted himself, they fell behind again as a Jordan Sheridan try was converted by Paul Emanuelli.

An Emanuelli penalty left the hosts 12-6 in front at the interval, but the Skolars came storming back at the start of the second half as Ryan McDonald muscled his way through the defence to score a try which Davies converted to level the scores.

The visitors then took the lead as skipper Dave Williams claimed another converted try soon after, but the Scorpions completely dominated the last 15 minutes as they snatched the victory.

Jack Pring weaved his way through the defence to score a try which Emanuelli converted to level the scores, before Emanuelli struck the decisive blow by slotting over a drop-goal with four minutes remaining.

The London Skolars host Oldham at their temporary home of the Queen Elizabeth Stadium in Enfield on Sunday (3pm).

Meanwhile, the Skolars have confirmed that their traditional Friday Night Lights match against Hunslet Hawks on August 22 will also take place at the QE Stadium due to delays in the redevelopment of the New River Stadium.

North Middlesex see off table-toppers

NORTH MIDDLESEX continued their dramatic revival by securing a superb four-wicket win at home to table-topping Teddington in the top flight of the Middlesex County Cricket League on Saturday.

A poor start to the season had left the side rooted to the foot of the table, but this latest triumph means they have secured three victories and a winning draw from their last four matches – a run which has seen them climb up to seventh.

Ed Bird was North Middlesex's star performer as he returned the stunning figures of 8-44 to play the key role in bowling the leaders out for just 99.

The hosts also struggled with the bat in reply, but Evan Flowers' 26 helped them to make it to 103-6 and seal a notable triumph.

Hornsey also enjoyed a successful day in the top flight as they won by 74 runs at Twickenham.

Michael Phillipson top-scored with 98 as Hornsey amassed 283-9 batting first, with Ed Wharton (66 not out) and Oliver Yew (17 not out) adding an unbeaten 69 for the last wicket prior to the declaration. Rashid Mullahzadah took 5-66 for Twickenham.

Clint McCabe (75) and Rhys Davies (50) both played well for the hosts in reply, but it was not enough as Paul Weekes took 4-74 to help dismiss them for 209.

Meanwhile, Highgate and North London were both victorious in Division Three – beating Harrow Town and MTSSC respectively.

Edward Binns (56), William Russell (50) and Christopher Arul (44) all scored heavily as Highgate amassed 238-8 batting first, before Craig Gourlay took 6-44 as Harrow Town could only make 157 in reply.

And North London were also comfortable winners, declaring on 180-8 before bowling out MTSSC for 147.

Hornsey go to Ealing on Saturday, while North Middlesex host Twickenham, Highgate entertain South Hampstead and North London are at home to Wembley.
